FIRST FLIGHT OF PLANE FROM LINER SUCCESSFUL TODAY

Chamberlin Hops Off from Leviathan, 120 Miles Out

Curtiss Field, N. Y., Aug. 1.—(AP)—After successfully flying here from the deck of the liner Leviathan 120 miles at sea, Clarence Chamberlin took to the air again to continue his flight to Teterboro, N. J.

Chamberlin reported that the take-off from the special runway on the Leviathan was even better than he had hoped.

He said he gained such speed that his plane took to the air about half way down the runway.

Chamberlin took off from the steamer at 8:14 a. m. after a delay of more than an hour due to heavy rain.

Through clear skies, he flew toward shore and because of fog landed at Curtiss Field. He arrived an hour and a quarter after leaving the Leviathan. After a brief stop, he took off for Teterboro arriving there at 10:15.

May Inaugurate Service Because he was not expected at Curtiss Field, no one but a few mechanics were on hand. The flight marked the first time an airplane had taken off from a passenger liner and inaugurated what may develop into a regular ship-to-shore service to expedite mail.

The Leviathan, which sailed shortly after midnight was accompanied by three destroyers to aid Chamberlin in case of accident.

The plan for the Leviathan and other ships of the U. S. lines to employ airplanes was evolved by Commander Hartley of the liner and Chamberlin when Chamberlin recently returned from Europe after flying to Germany with Charles A. Levine.

The service eventually will accommodate passengers who are in haste.

Chamberlin flew a biplane loaned him by the Wright Aeronautical company, driven by the same type of Wright whirling motor which carried him from New York to Germany in the Columbia.

When the Leviathan was in dry dock at Boston last week, the 115-foot runway was constructed above the top deck. From the end of the runway there was a 100 foot drop to the water.

Chamberlin climbed from the plane at Teterboro and handed nine packages, three letters and a mail pouch to Joseph Kuithe, mail carrier from the Hasbrouck Heights postoffice.

"The whole plan is practical," Chamberlin said. "I could just as well have carried passengers. I had no trouble taking off, although there was a 14-mile breeze."

PERFECT TAKE OFF. U. S. S. Destroyer Lawrence, Aug. 1.—(AP)—A new chapter in aviation was begun today when Clarence D. Chamberlin hopped off from the Leviathan in his Ploker bi-plane and headed for Teterboro, N. J.

The beautiful hop-off was made at 8:14. The little Ploker sped down the improvised runway on the boat deck and gripped the air at once. After circling the Leviathan, Chamberlin visited each of the ships of his convoy of three destroyers.

The Leviathan headed into a stiff westerly breeze just before Chamberlin took off.

There was fog ahead of the Leviathan, but Chamberlin headed into apparently good weather. It was estimated that the Leviathan was 32 miles off New York. Passengers could be seen waving from the decks as the little Ploker took the air. The hop-off was made from a runway made of planks set forward of the liner's forward funnel.

The weather, which had been very bad half an hour before the hop-off, was good.

Scott Hull and Roy Brooks and family visited friends in Amboy Sunday. During the afternoon both gentlemen assisted in shocking a piece of oats.

HENRY LEBOWICH, FORMERLY IN BUSINESS IN DIXON, DIED IN BROOKLYN, N. Y., YESTERDAY

Acute Stomach Attack Caused His Sudden Death in East

Dixon friends will be grieved to learn of the death of a former prominent Dixon business man, Henry Lebowich, who died suddenly at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., Sunday morning, according to a telegram received by Adolph Eichler of this city. Mr. Lebowich had not been feeling well for the past few days, but his death was very unexpected.

Mr. Eichler received a telegram about 9 o'clock Sunday morning and Herman Lebowich of Oregon, a brother of Henry, received a long distance telephone call from Dr. E. M. Lebowich, only son of the deceased, announcing the death. The message to Mr. Lebowich in Oregon stated that death was caused by an acute stomach attack. Herman Lebowich left Oregon for New York immediately on receipt of the message, and was due to reach that city this morning.

The deceased leaves besides his widow, his brother Herman Lebowich, a son, Dr. E. M. Lebowich, a most successful practicing physician at Jamaica, Long Island; and two daughters, (Pearl) Mrs. Morris A. Frey, residing at Bensonhurst, N. Y.; and (Ida), Mrs. Julius A. Miller of New York City.

Mr. Lebowich will be buried in New York with the Masonic ritual, but as the messages reaching Dixon and Oregon, bore no details, the time cannot be given, but it is thought the funeral services were held today.

Henry Lebowich was successfully associated with the business interests of Dixon for many years; being interested in the clothing and shoe business and finally conducting an exclusive shoe store. He was well known about the town; everyone liked him—Henry knew and liked everyone; he had a naturally bright mind and a generous heart. He leaves many good friends in Dixon who sincerely mourn his sudden death.

CONTINUATION OF CHAUTAUQUA PLAN OF BOARD

Directors Dixon Assn. Elected Officers Saturday Eve

At the close of the final session of the Chautauqua Saturday evening a meeting of the new Board of Directors was held, and the following officers elected to direct the 1928 season, which will be the 42nd consecutive program:

President—Rev. L. W. Walter. Vice-President—L. W. Miller. Secretary—Treasurer—B. H. Cleaver. In Saturday's paper the name of Dr. A. H. Burr was inadvertently omitted from the list of the new directors.

Negotiations are already afoot with the Lear Chautauqua Company of Bloomington to provide next year's talent, since unanimous approval was registered on this year's program. It is the mind of the new board that another year, however, the Chautauqua sessions and Bible Conference must be in consecutive weeks, since much regret was expressed by old-time Assembly visitors that a week intervenes this year.

The Mexican was brought here by Harry Scraggs, clerk of the commission. Deputy Sheriff Frank Miller after sary at the railroad camp, where Medina worked, made the complaint. It is alleged that the Mexican found fault with the food and seizing a knife threatened to kill several persons. Medina was discharged by the railroad company and will be taken back to Chicago this week after he completes his jail term.

JAPS ENDEAVOR TO SAVE NAVAL MEET THIS WEEK

Gibson is Standing Pat on Issue Concerning Cruisers

Geneva, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The deadlock in the naval conference was the subject of a long talk today between Viscount Ishii of Japan and W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the British admiralty, but so far as is known, nothing has taken place which reduces the risks of the conference failing. After his talk, Mr. Bridgeman conferred with the representatives of the British dominions.

The activity of the Japanese is creating the impression that either they are seeking to suggest some compromise or they are getting ready to suggest adjournment of the conference without holding the public plenary session Thursday.

Look to Washington The British apparently still find it difficult to believe that the Washington government is backing Hugh S. Gibson, chief American delegate, in his insistence upon freedom to construct cruisers with 8-inch guns.

When a newspaperman asked the British spokesman today if there were any change in the situation, the latter rejoined: "Won't there be other news from Washington about the cruiser question?"

When all press reports seemed to indicate that the American government, like Mr. Gibson, found the British plan quite unacceptable, the spokesman replied: "All that America wants is not a limitation but a liberty agreement."

Many Concessions The Americans maintain that the United States has been making concession after concession and that their disposition to restrict the number of 10,000 ton cruisers to twelve or thereabouts is really a concession which would doubtless meet with criticism in congress.

If the British, aided by the Japanese, can find no way out of the cruiser situation by Thursday the conference is expected to collapse, but hope is still entertained in some quarters that the British will make a move calculated to render further negotiations possible.

CUPID SELECTED LEE CO. JAIL TO FINISH ROMANCE

And Police Magistrate Simonson Performs First Ceremony

Cupid pulled a little affair strictly of his own Saturday afternoon in the parlor of the Lee County Jail, with Mrs. Ward Miller, wife of the sheriff as hostess. This affair was the marriage of Miss Vera Donald, a pretty and attractive girl of Wauwau, and Cordis (Jimmie) Donohoe of Alma, Ill. The hour of the wedding was 4:30 o'clock and Miss Helen Donald, a sister of the bride, was present to see her sister married.

Police Magistrate A. E. Simonson officiated. It was his first marriage ceremony since his induction into office, and aside from a few blushes, he performed his part of the affair splendidly. The manual used by Mr. Simonson has been in the Simonson family for over 100 years, being published in 1825 and was the property of his great grandmother.

On account of the age of Mr. Donohoe, 20 years of age it was necessary to obtain the consent of his mother to the marriage. Saturday forenoon a letter from his mother giving her consent was received at the jail and when Deputy Sheriff Fred Richardson read the letter to "Jimmie" he was so overjoyed that he turned several handsprings in the jail. He was told to dress in his best and get ready to go with his bride-to-be to obtain a license. Upon returning to the jail the young people walked into the parlor, which had been properly arranged by Mrs. Miller for the affair and where "Pastor" Simonson, with his witnesses stood ready to tie the knot. The persons who signed the marriage certificate as witnesses were Mrs. Ward Miller, Mrs. Frank Schwank, Deputy Sheriff Richardson and John H. Evers.

The groom was employed by the Rouse Construction Company and worked on the Peoria road south of Dixon, and doubtless will resume his work soon after his honeymoon.

After the ceremony Mrs. Schwank passed around a box of candy and all present offered their congratulations, wishing the young people much happiness.

Nachusa Child Fell on Needle Thursday

Frances, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Deput of Nachusa, suffered a painful injury Thursday afternoon at her home. She had been sewing clothes for her dollie and while at play afterward jumped from a chair to the floor. In jumping she stepped on a large needle she had been sewing with, and it penetrated the fleshy part of her right foot just under the toes. The injury was excruciatingly painful, and the little girl was brought to Dixon where a surgeon gave her an anesthetic and removed the half of the needle which had penetrated the foot eye first, the other half being also found. The wound gave the child no pain afterward and she is improving nicely now.

GEORGE A. WARD, VETERAN IN SERVICE OF AMERICAN EXPRESS CO., DIED SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Funeral Services to be Held Tuesday at Late Home

George A. Ward, for many years a prominent and respected citizen of Dixon, died at his home, 111 East Everett street Sunday afternoon at 1:20 o'clock, death following a stroke which he suffered last Thursday, probably the result of injuries he received in an automobile accident in the southern part of the state early in the summer.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and the remains will be taken to Fulton, Ill., Mr. Ward's former home, for burial.

Mr. Ward was a native of Columbus, Ohio, coming to Illinois in his boyhood with his parents, who settled in Fulton, where the deceased spent his earlier life. Later Mr. Ward entered the service of the American Express Co., with whom his faithful and efficient service won him repeated promotions until he was made agent for the company in Dixon, which position he held with fine success for many years. He was retired from active service in 1920, after forty-six years of service, and since then had lived quietly at his home north of the river.

He was of an active temperament, which belied his seventy-five years, and he took a keen interest in life which would be creditable to count less men many years his junior. He also manifested constant interest in the affairs of Dixon lodge No. 779, B. P. O. Elks, of which he was a member.

Mr. Ward is survived by his widow and one son, Dudley A. Ward of Buffalo, N. Y.

Albert Gunder's Pleasure Visit Ends Tragically

Disappeared in a Pool in Rockford Stone Quarry Sunday

Albert Gunder of Polo, aged 24, met death in a swimming pool in an abandoned stone quarry in Rockford at about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and at an early hour this afternoon his body had not been recovered from the 20 feet of water into which he suddenly disappeared while bathing in the presence of many swimmers.

His disappearance in the pool of the abandoned quarry, which had been fitted up for the use of bathers through the erection of bath houses and the installation of a life guard, brought a tragic end to a pleasure trip to the Forrest City which the victim and relatives made Sunday afternoon.

A few minutes before Gunder disappeared, while swimming near C. Shell Smith of Rockford, he had been struck a seemingly light blow in the face by a swimming board, which was propelled by two Rockford girls. The girls stated to the police today that after the mishap they had watched Gunder and he had swum away, apparently unhurt; but authorities theorize that he may have been partially dazed by the blow, which caused him to faint in the water and sink.

Dragging Continued.

As soon as he was missed by Smith, the life guard was called and he in turn notified the Winnebago county Sheriff's office, which responded with a force of deputies and grapping hooks, and until dark a force of men kept busy dragging for his body. The search was resumed at daylight today and was continuing unrelentingly at noon.

The unfortunate man was born in Polo where on June 15, 1924 he was married to Miss Jennie McCallin. His life was spent in Polo and in later years he was associated in the cement business with his father. He is survived by his widow; two children, Willard and Jeanette; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gunder; two sisters, Violet and Mrs. Louis Beckler; and one brother, Charles.

WHY ARE MENU CARDS SO MUCH VALUED?

A question which has mystified many in this town and in other towns also is this: Why are menu cards in both restaurants and confectionaries of such priceless value? One is allowed one peep at the card, and then it is whisked away in some mysterious manner; an article of rare value to be cherished. Now the patrons would like to do some of the eberishing themselves and the proprietors of the places patronized would realize a larger financial result if their clientele were allowed the privilege of gazing more than once at a menu. Rather than ask, and repeat it again, the customer more often than not, will leave without a second order—whereas if the menu card is left on the table, or within reach, the house is the gainer by more orders.

THE LAST FEW YEARS OF SCHOOL MEAN THE MOST

By Olive Roberts Barton

During the summer when Dick and Dora, free from school, are adding materially to the family income by vacation jobs, it must occur to many parents that it would be a wonderful relief if school days were over for good and the added bit to the budget could continue.

The struggle to make ends meet and to keep children in high school until the age limit of sixteen is past, often makes compulsory education appear in the light of an unjust law. Particularly when a boy or girl is strong, well developed mentally and physically, and educated far beyond the dreams of his parents or grandparents. The last year or two must seem unnecessary in many cases.

Perhaps parents may be more resigned to such a law when it is explained to them that it is chiefly the last few years of a child's school life that make American Americans. Otherwise it would be merely a group of communities of various nations, speaking different tongues, nursing home-land traditions, holding century-old hatreds and taking no particular pride in this land called the United States of America.

True, the good of the whole is often a burden to the individual, but the blanket law of public education for all children during their formative years is the greatest factor for welding us together in one strong nation that we possess. Children are taught more things than lessons. They are learning a common ideal—that of obligation and patriotism. Without it the country would not hold together for a very great length of time under present conditions.

To be a nation indivisible, people must talk a common language and freedom can never come before national unity. The same thoughts. Individual freedom. When it does, there is no nation.

VACATIONS AS NECESSITIES.

The vacation habit in America has become a great commercial venture.

A business running into millions is done annually by travel agencies in all large cities.

Less than a generation ago it was only the bloated plutocrat of song and story who hied away with fishing tackle and hip boots to a place where the trout swam in shadowed pools and the canoe floated over lily buds.

But today any $18-a-week clerk has his two weeks' vacation with pay and, if he cannot quite manage northern Canada or the national parks of the west, he can pay his $2.35 fare to the nearest "resort," strut his stuff in his $2.95 cotton bathing suit, and come back with as good a coat of tan as his boss, who spent $500 for his two weeks.

The younger generation takes the annual vacation as much for granted as Christmas Day off and chicken and ice cream on Sunday.

The older generation, especially the women of that generation, are apt to look upon this annual trekking with scorn and derision. They have words to say about such extravagance, and they recall that "when I was a girl" money wasn't spent like that.

But "when I was a girl" anyone and everyone, from those in the high places to those in the seats of the lowly, had the joys of a natural world about them. They had the rose of sunrise and the gold of sunset. They had cool waters in which to swim and fish and paddle. They had mellow golden moons and the fragrance of summer clover all about. They had the breezes of open country, country lush and green and ripe with growing things. They had the stillness of nights in a world where the wheels and furnaces of commerce were not known.

The people of a generation ago did not need two weeks a year in which to remember that man was not born to smell smoke-laden air and listen to the whirring grinding wheels of industry the year round.

Vacations have become the great national venture that they are today, not because we are a richer nation, not because of a more inflated standard of living, but because we have gone from an agricultural world into an industrial one, from a natural life into an unnatural one, and we cannot stand the gaff without at least a little breathing spell in which to return to the earth that alone enables human beings to live.

THE PEN OR THE PROPELLER?

The recent long distance flights have done more than "cement good will and friendships between nations," which seems to be the most stressed effects, according to the analysts. They have also stimulated the latent poesy of the world into fullblown expression.

The Lindbergh flight, especially, caught the imagination of the poetic world, and the deluge came. One New York newspaper reported five bushel baskets filled with unsolicited verse. They reported a certain similarity in each of the thousands of poems received. The majority of the poets and poetesses referred to "the air Lochinvar who came out of the west," and much ink was spent, too, in the phrase "silver bird."

We can hardly know for a few years whether any truly immortal lines have been born of these flights or not. If there have been, it is sure that in 50 or 100 years the flight will be known for those lines.

History gives assurance that many men did as dramatic and important deeds on that night that Paul Revere ran his horse foam-flecked through the countryside near Boston, but it was about Revere that the lines were written—

"A hurry of hoofs in a village street,

A shape in the moonlight, a bulk in the dark,

And beneath, from the pebbles, in passing, a spark

Struck out by a steed flying fearless and fleet."

It's safe to wager that in 2077 the best known of the many trans-oceanic flights of 1927 will be the one which has the most dramatic lines penned about it.

Which is mightier, the pen or the propeller?

This certainly would be a dull summer were it not for the airplanes, worms, flagpole sitters and Stillmans.

Cameras clicked in the Black Hills but the trout refused to bite. It seems the fish have no public relations department.

Mussolini says his successor hasn't been born. Perhaps not actually, but potentially he lives—and drives on every road in the country on every Sunday afternoon.

The Byrd flight turned out to be news after all—a transatlantic flight that ended as a Channel swim.

Grass widows aren't called that because they're green.

A new show in New York is called "The Bare Facts of 1927." Some kind of a play about bathing beaches, we suppose.

A novelist wants to bring about a "tipless" America. He declared the practice is due to fear. When we have the next war, we're going to let the Pullman porters do our fighting for us.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The Ice Cream Hills were queer to see, and just as odd as they could be. Said Clowry, "Oh, let's slide on them. 'Twill be the best fun yet. Then Carpy broke right in and said, 'Well, if you want to, go ahead! But, not for me, because I know that we'd get soaking wet.'"

Just at this moment Scouty cried, "I'd like to take another ride upon the candy rabbit. Will we go, or are you skered?" The bunch all said, "Sure, we'll go 'long." But then they found something was wrong. The rabbit they'd been riding on had quickly disappeared.

They looked and looked, to no avail. Then Scouty shouted, "Where's a pal? I surely wish we had one. We could gather lots of cream." But, though the bunch looked all around for quite a while, no pal was found. And then what happened, certainly was quite a funny scene.

They picked up ice cream in their hands, and each one shouted, "This is grand." They ate and ate until they'd had enough to satisfy. Then Clowry shouted, "My, the breeze around these hills will make me freeze. We'd better leave this ice cream land, and come back by and bye."

"Where will we go?" somebody said, and Scouty answered, "Just ahead I think we'll find a winding road. Let's find out where it goes. These ice cream hills were sure a treat, but we have had all we can eat. I'll take the lead. Just follow me, and I'll follow my nose."

So, off they went, a happy band, not knowing where they'd shortly land. They found the road and walked along, and then the whole bunch ran. Right soon they found a little house, and sneaked up quiet as a mouse, and in the doorway of the place they found the Taffy Man.

leg, though the figures are so easily interpreted. But the mystery vanishes with the explanation that any resident of Chaumont will give—

"C'est la ligne Allemand."

The extemporaneous artists of the A. E. F. were numerous. Some did their work on ambulances. One, a chauffeur of the 2nd Division, placed an Indian head in a star on the side of his truck and did the job so well that the design was adopted as the insignia for the division. Others used their handiwork in marking the names of streets in shattered villages with such names as: "42nd Street," "Michigan Avenue," "Rue Market" and "Boulevard Woodward."

Many were the jobs that were done with a crude brush and a can of thick paint. But the outstanding effort is the one that still remains on the wall at Chaumont and will be there long years after the American

SAINT and SINNER

Although Selma Pruitt, daughter of the Lincoln Pruitts, as the millionaire family was always called, and sister of George Pruitt, an erstwhile suitor of Faith's, was too thin and dark and intense, she looked beautiful to Faith that afternoon. For Faith had passed through Gethsemane had felt, as she hurried home after having been crudely and obviously snubbed by her neighbors on Serenity Boulevard, that she could never hold her head up again. And here was Selma Pruitt calling on her, greeting her with an affectionate kiss. The Pruitt limousine, an imported French car, was parked before the Hathaway home for the whole neighborhood to see.

"I just ran in to invite you and Bob and Cherry to dinner on Wednesday, if you are free," Selma told Faith, when the two girls were served with iced tea and tiny, thin sandwiches by Mrs. Lundy. "I telephoned and the maid told me you were out calling on your neighbors. So I thought I'd drive down and deliver the invitation in person. I—thought you'd be back soon," she added, with elaborate casualness, but her eyes wandered away from Faith's.

"Thanks awfully," Selma said, swallowing a sudden lump in her throat. "It—was kind of you to come. And—you were right. I—I wasn't gone long."

"I hope you won't think I'm a meddlesome cat, Faith, but will you let me tell you why I didn't think you'd be out long on your calls?" Selma raised her keen dark eyes to Faith's stricken brown ones.

"Of course!" Faith gasped, her face flooding, with the scarlet of humiliation. "I—I know you're my friend, Selma."

"All right then, old dear! Here goes!" Selma exclaimed with assumed gaiety. "I have a cousin living in this neighborhood, you know. She may have called on you—I told her to. Mrs. Hunter Collins?" Faith nodded, speechless. Mme. Collins had called two weeks after her marriage to Bob—

"Well, Marcia—Mrs. Collins—belongs to a bridge club that includes nearly every woman in the neighborhood. Call themselves the Bide-a-Wee Bridge Club, or some fool name like that. Marcia was at the house last night and she said she had suggested to the other club members that they invite you to become a member. Well, the truth is—"

"I was blackballed?" Faith asked quietly, but her eyes were burning with anger.

"Something of the sort," Selma admitted. "Darned tabby cats! But it was because of Cherry—not you, of course. There seems to be a general idea that our little Cherry doesn't add to the social tone of Enfield. No, don't shut me up, Faith, darling! You'd better know what they're saying. It seems that Cherry's trial for murder, in view of the fact that she was acquitted, might have been forgiven her, but nature's haste in presenting her with a baby two months ahead of schedule is another matter."

"Do they think the baby—that it was Mr. Cluny?" Faith choked with anger.

"Heavens, no!" Selma repudiated

the idea. "They think Chris Wiley is the father all right, but that that is the reason she didn't—couldn't—marry poor old Mr. Cluny, and that that explains the separation between her and Chris now. They believe Chris married her because she—well, you know, honey! There's no use harrowing you with details. I just thought I'd better warn you. I wish to heaven I had told you before you set out on your round of calls, you poor darling!"

"Thanks, Selma," Faith said stiffly, but she was praying that she could keep from crying until after Selma had gone.

"Of course George was wild, simply wild!" Selma went on cheerfully. "In fact it was his idea that I invite the three of you to dinner, but of course," she added hastily, as Faith's face flamed, "I had intended to for ages, but the weather, you know—so hot—"

"It is very kind of you and—George," Faith cut in quiveringly. "I'll see if Cherry or Bob has any other plans, and let you know. Now, would you like to see the baby? She's the most adorable thing, Selma—"

But now Faith was praying that Selma would go, go quickly, and leave her to her shame and her tears.

TOMORROW: Faith has fresh cause to be jealous of Cherry.

CALL BY NUMBER ON YOUR TOLL CALLS, IF YOU CAN.

There is no mystery about the telephone business. The same general business principles apply to its successful operation as apply to merchandising, manufacturing, or mining. Any business to be successful must be well-managed, must have ample capital, must furnish something the people want, and must get a price for its product that will enable it to pay operating expense and a fair return upon capital investment.

A telephone company is different from merchandising or manufacturing, in that it buys no goods to sell at a profit, neither does it turn raw materials into a finished product for the purpose of making money. It furnishes no physical commodity for others to buy and possess as their own. It does not buy and sell, but it enables others to buy and sell and traffic and barter in the necessities of life. The things it buys, and the labor it employs, are for the use of others. It is a functional institution, organized for the sole purpose of service, of enabling others to carry on the business, and the social affairs of life. It seeks to serve the public, not to profiteer off of the public.

WOODMEN'S PAPER PRAISES MEETING HELD AT ASSEMBLY

Recent Forrester's Encampment Written Up Fully

The Modern Woodman for August, the official publication of the Modern Woodmen of America, in its account of the Forrester's Encampment held at the Assembly Park in this city July 2, 3 and 4, said "the people of Dixon are deserving of commendation for the hospitality extended the hundreds of foresters and the thousands of visitors, and it is felt certain that every outsider would be more than willing to go to Dixon at any time in the future."

The Modern Woodman's account of the encampment follows:

What had the appearance and all the earmarks of a national forester encampment was the zone meeting of the Modern Woodmen forester teams of northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin at Dixon, Illinois, on July 2, 3 and 4, as the four hundred men in camp did the usual duties answering to reveille, mess calls, inspection, practice drills, etc., and they also had plenty of fun. Yes, they had a pajama parade, but then that is not what they called it. They thoroughly enjoyed every minute of the time as the Assembly grounds, the scene of this, the first zone encampment in Illinois, answered the purpose in every particular.

The encampment was named Camp Davis, in honor of Gen. S. R. Davis of Rock Island, who passed away April 29, 1927. Col. H. C. Nevins of Chicago was in command. His staff was composed of the following officers: Elmer E. Frazier, lieutenant colonel, Chicago Heights; Fred C. Morey, regimental adjutant, Waukegan; Henry Walters, regimental quartermaster, Chicago; A. M. Myers, aide-de-camp, Chicago; W. A. Dinsbeer, chaplain, Chicago; E. H. Peterson, regimental musician, Chicago.

Six Illinois battalions were represented under command of the following:

Third battalion, Capt. Henry Cohrs, Chicago; Fourth, Maj. Geo. Nelson, Chicago Heights; Fifth, John T. Moriarty, Chicago; Sixth, Maj. Geo. C. Levin, Chicago; Seventh, Maj. Elmer F. Johnson, Rock Island; Eighth, Maj. Wm. M. Cate, Rockford. The Wisconsin contingent was under command of Col. N. D. Judson, Beloit.

The teams at the encampment were from the following places:

Camp 20, Rockford; 26, Rock Island; 45, Franklin Grove; 46, DeKalb; 51, Rockford; 56, Dixon; 92, Galesburg; 110, Bloomington; 224, Monroe Center; 553, Downer's Grove; 1036, Lee Center; 1339, Monmouth; 2825, Chicago; 3968, Englewood; 4964, Chicago Heights; 5142, Riverdale; 7363, Chicago; 10408, Brookfield; 11416, Lawndale; 13252, Chicago; 16488, Clearwater; 348, Beloit, Wisconsin; 391, Kenosha; 2874, Milton Junction; 189, Iowa City, Iowa.

Flag Raising Ceremony.

On Sunday morning at 9:45 the colors were officially raised in headquarters square of Camp Davis with imposing ceremonies. Gen. Jos. Riehemann was master of ceremonies and in opening his remarks stated that this first zone encampment in Illinois was named for Brig. Gen. S. R. Davis, now deceased, who had been an important factor in the development of the M. W. A. F., as he was actively identified with the movement since 1891 when he organized and commanded the team of Independence Camp 25, Rock Island.

The line of march was from the Assembly grounds and across the bridge through the principal streets and return. The sidewalks were lined with people, particularly in the business districts, and traffic was halted for the marchers. The foresters passed the reviewing stand on the return to the camp grounds, this being on the north side of the river. Taken all in all this was the greatest forester parade at any zone or state encampment held previously.

Immediately following the parade the teams assembled in regimental formation at the Assembly grounds, where silver cups and ribbons were awarded the winning teams in the competitive drills. The presentations were made by Gen. Jos. Riehemann in the presence of Col. H. C. Nevins and his staff. The teams then marched off the field with the Y. M. C. A. band leading.

Motion pictures were taken on all three days of the encampment, and these will be ready for showing in due time.

The people of Dixon are deserving of commendation for the hospitality extended the hundreds of foresters and the thousands of visitors, and it is felt certain that every outsider would be more than willing to go to Dixon at any time in the future.

Railroads Must Work With New Barge Line

Washington, July 30.—(AP)—Railroads serving upper Mississippi river territory must establish joint rates for the transportation of freight over the newly instituted Upper Mississippi River Barge Line. It was decided today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Save your money each month by buying shares in the Dixon Loan & Building Association. Ask the Secretary, H. U. Bardwell, about its advantages.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"LOVE" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ Scientist, Sunday, July 31. The Golden Text was from I John 4:7, "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God: and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."

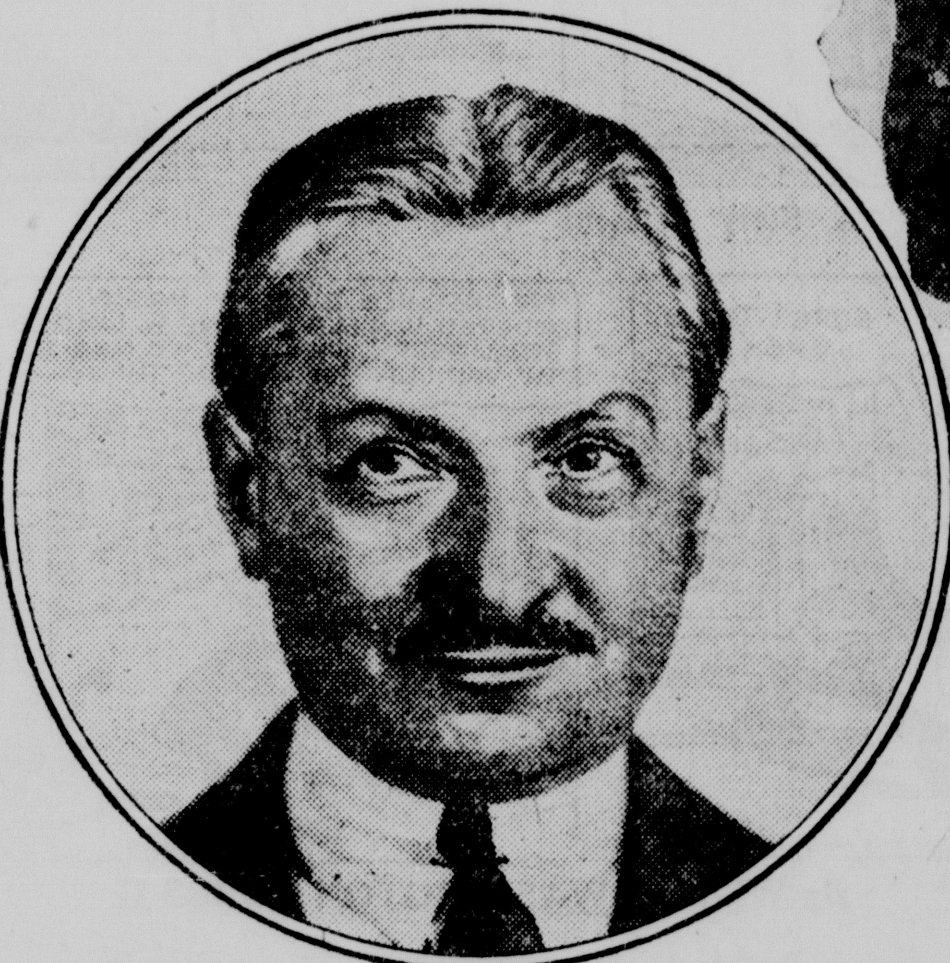

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matthew 5:43,44).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "When the human element in him struggled with the divine, our great Teacher said: 'Not my will, but Thine, be done!—that is, Let not the flesh, but the Spirit, be represented in me. This is the new understanding of spiritual Love. It gives all for Christ, or Truth. It blesses its enemies, heals the sick, casts out error, raises the dead from trespasses and sins, and preaches the gospel to the poor, the meek in heart' (p. 33).

"I got the idea from Florenz Ziegfeld"

Behind the scenes at the Ziegfeld Theatre Gladys Glad is remarking to Flo Kennedy between acts of the Follies.

Florenz Ziegfeld, famous theatrical producer, writes:

"As the producer of 'The Ziegfeld Follies' I know full well how important it is for my stars to have clear voices at all times. Several years ago, when I first began to smoke Lucky Strikes, I noticed that my voice remained unharmed after a most strenuous time directing rehearsals. I passed this information on to my stars and now we are all agreed: Lucky Strike is a delightful smoke and most assuredly protects the voice, eliminating any coughing, which often interrupts a perfect performance."

Florenz Ziegfeld

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

No Throat Irritation - No Cough.

The Soul of a Railroad

A railroad may be said to be composed of a body and a soul. The first is the railway property, consisting of the engines, cars, tracks, tools, machinery and buildings—things of little value except as they are wisely used in the production of transportation. The second is the moving spirit, consisting of the employees, who animate the railroad and who give to it character and ideals.

A great deal depends upon the ability and integrity of railway employees. The service they produce through the utilization of railway property is one of the mainstays of our civilization. Without their ministrations our entire fabric of production, manufacture and distribution would collapse. Daily the railway employees of this country must handle safely, efficiently and economically railway property representing an investment of approximately $13,000 for each employe, and daily they must safeguard and expedite the movement of more than two million passengers and shipments worth in the neighborhood of two billion dollars.

Personal responsibility of a highly exacting sort is the lot of every railway employe. Team work and willingness to serve are essential—they should be bred in the bone. With so much dependent upon them, is it any wonder that railway workers are inclined to regard their railway employment as a mark of distinction? This attitude toward their calling is true not only of employes engaged in the more highly specialized branches of railway work but also of those whose occupations differ little, if at all, from work in other fields.

Every railroad is measured by the character of its employes, as reflected in the service the railroad provides. Upon all the employes to some extent, but more especially upon those who come in direct contact with the public, depends the reputation of the railroad. It is no exaggeration to say that the employes stand for the railroad in the public mind.

The Illinois Central System regards itself as fortunate in the character of its employes. Many of them represent the second and third generations in this railroad's service. Their loyalty, courtesy and co-operation make possible the high standing which this railroad enjoys in public esteem—a standing which is the finest possible tribute to the family spirit of the organization.

The Illinois Central System was never better fortified than today in both plant and personnel. Body and soul, it is ready to meet all the demands made upon it.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

President, Illinois Central System.

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture
Production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, bargains her for gold to Raviot, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Raviot; she escapes, and returns to the deserted town, but Fabien has gone. Homeless, both man and woman, looking for each other. Manon is seized by a rascally.

CHAPTER X—Continued

Only a thin partition and a few feet of space separated Fabien from Manon and her tormentor. He even heard the man's coarse laugh and a girl's scream. He had never heard Manon scream and she was so terrified that there was no familiar ring in her voice, however, it was a call for help, and Fabien rose to his feet. Dazed from his first bout with brandy, he staggered crazily and the landlord forced him into a seat.

"What you want to butt in for?" he growled.

"A lady in distress—" explained Fabien feebly.

"Lady, my eye—she come in here with him, didn't she?"

Fabien did not know. But on second thought he decided it did not matter. He could see several women, from where he sat, and they were all carousing noisily with their male companions. It seemed to be the usual thing. The spark of chivalry faded from Fabien's eyes and he reached for another drink. "God, I wish I could find Manon!" His head went down on his arms and he cried, real tears from exhaustion and worry.

By this time Manon's strength was gone.

Manon's efforts to free herself were futile and brought forth shouts of enjoyment from the big bully. His women were always willing, for his carousal, to the point of annoyance. This was the first time he had had to argue with one and the conquest was promising.

"Come on, beauty, it's time for a kiss," he whispered hoarsely with his mouth very near to Manon's lips.

With all her might she pushed at his face with both hands and screamed. But this did not prevent two strong arms from circling her waist and drawing her close.

By this time Manon's strength was gone and sobs of fright and hysteria shook her whole body.

Up in the attic room when Lescaut had promised to keep an eye on his rebellious sister he was not making an idle threat. She was too valuable to become lost or stolen again. Thus it was that, unknown to Manon, Lescaut lurked in the shadows when she started out alone from the pension and he followed at a safe distance. He wanted her to get a taste of being alone on the streets of Paris. According to his idea it would be the best thing in the world to put her in the proper state of receptiveness to his plans. But Lescaut had no idea of permitting Manon to become soiled by her contact with sordid reality—the Comte preferred her as she was, not as she might become if left on the loose without funds and a protector.

Lescaut saw Manon carried into the cafe, but he waited just long enough for her to appreciate his interference before making an appearance.

His entrance was most timely. Manon's strength had given way and the bully's loose lips were within an inch of her own when Lescaut roughly took him by the arm and spun him around. Surprised at this interference the man cursed loudly and made known his willingness to fight it out.

A purse of glinting gold Louis was forced into his fist as Lescaut explained, "I would appreciate your generosity in giving her up. She happens to be my sister and I must take her home."

Mollified by the gold and its promised pleasures the man relinquished his tempting prey.

Almost dead from fright, Manon clung to Lescaut for protection and support. It seemed that the experience of the last few hours must have been a nightmare and, although Manon knew they were not, she could hardly wait to get out of that horrible cafe.

Realizing that she no longer made any resistance about going with him, Lescaut led her triumphantly through the center room toward the outside door.

They passed a man with his head buried on outstretched arms, but they did not look in his direction. If they had, Manon would have recognized Fabien. No explanation would have been necessary and she would have remained with him, even in that terrible place, rather than accompany Lescaut to the Comte's gorgeous mansion.

It seems strange and wrong that when two people loved as truly as Fabien and Manon that their lives should be wrecked and miserable as a result of their passion.

Fabien stared at the lonely table until his dazed condition had been absorbed in sleep.

When he went out into the early morning his pockets were empty. But he was saved the anguish of knowing that Manon had been very near to him during the night and was by now, very much against her will, established as the Comte de Raviot's pampered mistress.

CHAPTER XI

Days and days of weary searching brought no trace of Manon.

It was impossible for Fabien to concentrate on anything until she had been found. He could not return to his father and hear Manon slandered, and he was in no mood to resume his studies. Love had so engulfed his mind and heart that he had surrendered himself to its resulting misery and declined every avenue of escape.

Tiberge was his one friend and support, without whose many voluntary loans Fabien would have starved. His courage was kept up only by the belief that Manon was true and trying as hard to find him as he was to locate her.

The passing weeks brought a change in his former neat appearance. His clothes grew shabby and he did not care. He knew that as soon as he found Manon his interest and ambition would be revived and he would enjoy the best life offered.

Tiberge never mentioned the call he made on Manon, yet he sensed that in some way it influenced her departure and as time passed and he saw how deeply and seriously Fabien was affected, he regretted the part he had played—not in their separation for he felt that was right—but in his friend's sorrow and broken spirit. He had never realized that love could work such havoc with a man's life.

A desire to justify his own stand, and perhaps bring Fabien to his senses, made Tiberge begin a personal search for Manon.

He was successful in locating her. Discovering the kind of life she was leading gave him complete vindication in the matter. He was right about her being the wrong type of woman for Fabien. Tiberge hurried to relate the news because he was sure that Fabien's interest and anguish would cease when he knew the truth, then he would be willing to return to his father and his calling.

They were walking along the Boulevard together when Tiberge said, "Heartache is a bitter thing to endure alone. We who love you have a right to share it—come back!"

"I shall never leave Paris until I have found Manon," replied Fabien tearlessly.

Now was Tiberge's chance. "But Manon is lost to you. She has placed herself under the protection of the Comte de Raviot." He carefully studied Fabien's face and felt sorry for him.

"Damn you! Do you think I believe that lie?" Fabien's eyes blazed and his fists were clenched. "My friend—it is the truth! I want only to help you." Tiberge spoke soothingly but it was useless.

Fabien quickened his stride and left Tiberge behind as though he no longer desired his society. However, he had not gone more than a few paces when he stopped dead in his tracks and peered tragically into a carriage that was passing by.

It was a beautiful and expensive carriage but he did not notice that. Neither was he conscious that his gaiters and clothes were being splattered with mud from the wheels. All he saw was—Manon! His beautiful Manon! Still beautiful—more lovely than when he last saw her—but no longer his! This was too evident from her luxurious attire and magnificent jewels.

Two Veteran Engine Drivers End Careers

Danville, Ill., July 30.—(AP)—A combined service almost as old as the railway history of the country, was ended today by two veteran engineers of the Cairo division of the Big Four Railroad. Charles Blaklee, engineer for more than 53 years, made his last run from Danville to Mt. Carmel. There he was relieved by Henry Dolahan, 46 years in the service, who made his final run to Cairo. Both men are past seventy. Their engine was decorated with a huge banner and flowers.

ROCHELLE NEWS

Rochelle—The following committee has been appointed by Mayor Wilbur B. McHenry to arrange for Rochelle's monstrous big Highway Jubilee to commemorate the official opening of the Meridian Highway, October 6th: W. H. Hohenadel, Frank Barker, S. P. Herrick, Phil W. May, C. A. Stafford, E. F. Heath, C. P. Unger, Geo. D. O'Brien, R. F. Harter, Frank Carney, W. J. Huston, Charles Collier, B. F. Foley, Geo. N. Grieve, J. W. Whitson, Joe D. Sweeney, G. D. Elmer and C. A. Anderson. Governor Len Small, Frank T. Sheets, Chief Highway Engineer; C. R. Miller, director of the state department of Public Works and Buildings; Ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden and others are expected to be present and make the principal addresses. The contract of the McCarthy Improvement Company calls for the completion of the highway by September 15th and aside from the bridges the work should be completed easily by that time. This will give the paving ample time for curing before the formal opening. Bands, drum corps, a big fireworks display, pavement dancing and other attractions are planned. Over 1,300 feet of concrete was poured Monday on the right of way just north of town, being a record breaker day's work. The big mixer is now in position for city paving. The descendants of the late William H. and Elida Fowler held their annual family reunion at the home of Martha Fowler last Sunday. There were eighty-one of the clan present, including all the children, grandchildren and great grandchildren of Mrs. Fowler, who celebrated her ninety-fifth birthday anniversary, Saturday, July 23rd, the day before the reunion. Her six children are: Garrett, Mrs. Elizabeth Owen, Miss Martha Fowler, William, Mrs. Emma Myers and Eli Fowler. There are eight grandchildren and six great grandchildren. A sister-in-law, Mrs. Martha Smith, aged 85 was present. An important meeting of the American Legion will be held at their hall this (Monday) evening. The state convention will be held at Joliet the 29th and 30th of August. In all probability this will be the largest convention ever held in the state. A big parade will be held in which the Rochelle Legion is entitled to fifth place in the line of march, by reason of its per cent of membership. Rochelle Post No. 403 should have a good representation at this convention. At the local meeting Monday evening it is hoped all Legionnaires will be present, as two delegates and two alternates will be chosen to attend the Joliet convention. Clarence Taylor will attend the Illinois championship tennis matches at the Skokie Country Club at Glencoe on Saturday and will spend the week end at Maywood and Evanston. Vincent Carney will attend the matches. Sunday. Taylor won the singles championship in the Rochelle Tennis Club tournament. Mrs. Harvey Phelps and son John, and daughter, Frances, expect to leave Los Angeles, California for home, August 4th, arriving here the following Sunday. John Moore, of Eleventh street, Rockford, was arrested by local police here Tuesday on request of Sheriff Baldwin of Rockford, charged with auto theft. Moore was truck driver for the McCarthy Improvement Co. The Winnebago county sheriff came to Rochelle for the suspect. The Modern Woodmen will hold a picnic Sunday, August 7th, at William Hunt's grove, west of Rochelle. All Woodmen and their families and all Royal Neighbors and their families are invited to attend. Families are requested to bring picnic baskets. A refreshments stand will be maintained on the grounds and coffee will be served free at noon. Three hundred feet of new fire hose has been purchased by the City and added as extra equipment to the local fire fighting apparatus. Rochelle now has 1,000 feet of hose. Another fire safeguard is the installation on the DeKalb-Ogla County Company's roof of a police siren. This device is operated by the telephone forces and gives immediate warning for officers to report and learn the cause of the alarm. Joe Askvig, local Packard and Nash distributor, has purchased the Auto Laundry Service plant of Earl Walters. Mr. Askvig is installing a gas, oil and greasing station and will supply crank case service. The location is on Cherry avenue, east of Main street. The Mid-West Canneries are finishing their pea pack this week. Operations have been suspended at the new factory and only one plant is at work. A large portion of the force was accordingly laid off, and have returned to their homes. The crop is short this year on account of the dry weather and damage by hail, but is reported to be of good quality. The present outlook for sweet corn is excellent but a good drenching rain is needed to facilitate the de-

The PENNY PRINCESS

"I haven't any sex appeal," Vera acknowledged bitterly. "Where do I come in, Jerry Macklyn?" Flora demanded indignantly. "Why not make it a foursome about half the time? You and young Peter, Vee-Vee and I? The kid needs example as well as direct instruction, and I know of no more competent graduate of the charm school than Flora Cartwright!" "Does it always have to be—Peter and me, you and Vee-Vee?" "Oh, we'll switch partners now and then, so Vee-Vee can practice on young Peter," Jerry assured her innocently. Before the girl could answer the doorbell shrilled. Flora flew to answer it, throwing a gay glance over her shoulder: "I told Peter to stay away, but I knew he couldn't do it. I don't know what I'm going to do with the poor, infatuated infant!" But it was not Peter. It was the uniformed elevator boy, delivering an immense box of flowers. "Peter is so extravagant," Flora murmured, a pleased smile playing over her face. Then suddenly her smile was wiped out; her blue eyes turned to ice. "It's for you, Vera. From Peter, I suppose. I think, Jerry," she turned to the embarrassed young man, "that your time could be spent to better advantage in teaching a passe middle-aged woman how to hold her suitors. Vee-Vee doesn't seem to be in any urgent need of instruction." Flora flashed an April smile at Jerry over Vee-Vee's shoulder. "I've been so bored with poor, dear Peter. I'm glad he's at last taken 'no' for an answer. You don't know, Jerry, what a relief it will be to me to associate with a clever, mature man, a real man of the world! We'll have great fun watching the youngsters, won't we, Jerry?" (To Be Continued) Jerry Macklyn makes an unusual request of Vee-Vee in the next chapter, just as she is about to start for Minnetonka.

THIS is more than I had bargained for," Jerry Macklyn grinned at Vera Cameron and her aunt, Flora Cartwright, seated side by side on the living room couch. "I've finished my job. I said I'd turn you into a beauty, Miss Cameron, if the Peach Bloom cosmetics were any good, and I've done it. I don't know where you got the idea that I could give you any pointers on how to be fatal to men, as Mrs. Cartwright puts it." "Nonsense, Jerry Macklyn!" "In the first place," Jerry began seriously, "every man likes a pretty girl, the prettier the better. You're more than pretty now, Vee-Vee; you're beautiful. But just beauty alone won't get you very far. You've got to have charm and—sex appeal if you want to have men fluttering around you." "I haven't any sex appeal," Vera acknowledged bitterly. "How do you know you haven't?" Jerry challenged her. Flora Cartwright clapped her small hands and laughed deliciously. "Oh, I know what you're going to say," Vera moaned. "You're going to pull the ancient wheeze that men don't like girls who have brains. Beautiful and dumb!" "That's just where you're wrong," Jerry contradicted her triumphantly. "It's no credit to a man if a dumb girl falls for him. He has an uneasy suspicion that she hasn't sense enough to know what a prize she's drawn. What a man likes is a girl with beauty, charm and brains enough to conceal the fact that she has more brains than he has. Your one big trouble, Vee-Vee, is going to be that you are so darned clever! You make every man you work with feel like an ignoramus, who ought to be fired so that you could have his job." "Did I make you feel that way?" "Did you?" Jerry echoed. "Why, it's been all I could do to keep myself from running to old man Canfield and saying, 'Canfield, I'm licked. I'm through. And I'm a dirty dog for holding down a job that rightfully belongs to somebody else. Make Miss Cameron advertising manager, Canfield. She knows more about advertising"

As a last resort Serbovskid went to a professor of the scientific department of the Supreme Council of Public Economy. He asked for aid, but was refused a hearing and was told to get out. The infuriated inventor seized a roll of his samples and struck the professor in the face. Two months later he received a subsidy of $1000 for further experiments, less a fine of $12 for damage of the professoral nose. ## BIG TRAIN WILL BE HONORED BY FANS TOMORROW

Walter Johnson Completes 20 Years in Big League

Washington, Aug. 1.—(AP)—When the sun sets this evening Walter Johnson will have rounded out a fifth of a century as a major league pitcher—and he has served only one club, Washington.

Twenty years ago tomorrow, the "Old Master" toed the mound for his first start in the big show. He pitched seven innings against Detroit and was relieved in the eighth by Hughes with the score 2-1 against him after he had given the Tigers six hits. Detroit subsequently won 3-2.

Tomorrow, Johnson will face the Tigers again, but in a different setting. It will be "Johnson Day." He is to receive baseball's first "distinguished service medal" which will be presented by Commissioner Landis.

Is a Good Loser.
Of the many records he has piled up, there is one most unique. Not once has he had a serious argument with an umpire or been ordered from the field or bench. When the decision goes the other way, he is a good loser.

A number of Johnson's records are due to the fact that he has stayed in the game so much longer than the average pitcher, but there are many more to which this fact has relation.

Made Many Records.
In 1920 he pitched a no-hit game against the Red Sox. For 12 seasons he led the American League pitchers in strike outs. For six seasons he achieved the greatest number of victories and in two years had the lowest earned run mark.

In 1913 he pitched 56 consecutive scoreless innings.

Johnson's first world series opportunity came in 1924 after he had been pitching 17 years. Then, after apparently having failed, he faced the Giants as a relief pitcher in the deciding game and was credited with the victory that gave Washington its first world championship.

Seen From Press Boxes in Major League Ball Parks

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

They are still waiting for a National League leader to crack, but August 1 found the three headlines making way for another—the Giants. While Pittsburgh was idle yesterday the Cubs moved it within a half game of the top. The Bruins slammed the ball and downed Philadelphia 12-5. Root hung up his nineteenth victory and Wilson got his 19th homer.

The Giants, by trimming the Cardinals, made it four out of five games for the road trip to date. McGraw's club put on a late inning rally to beat the Red Birds, 7-4.

When Cincinnati broke even in a double header with Brooklyn they ran their winning mark to 16 victories in 20 starts. Cincinnati kept a half a game ahead of the Dodgers. The Ohioans took the opener 6-2 and dropped the second, 3-2 in 10 innings. Lisenbee set back Detroit 7-2, in the only game played in the American League. Washington pounded three Detroit pitchers for 10 hits. The Yankees at Cleveland were halted by rain.

Shining Steps

Today the men who are blazing the trail of progress share the spirit of determination which obtains throughout the organization of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Colonel Lindbergh started out on his high adventure because he shared this spirit. He was unsatisfied with the progress of aviation. With firm faith in its future he set forth to further the cause.

The results of his flight were two-fold. He made a new chapter in aviation history and he brought about for a brief moment a world unity and brotherhood never before known.

For a short space the whole world was lifted up in a universal state of exalted feeling and united as one being with one concern—the fate of the "Lone Eagle" winging his solitary way over the Atlantic.

A shining step indeed! The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) pays tribute to Colonel Lindbergh.

The spirit which makers of progress share is a spirit of dissatisfaction—a searching after better things unknown.

All the builders of our history have been—not dissatisfied—but unsatisfied men, with a vision like that of Piers the Plowman to "Do good, do better, do best."

It is this spirit which is felt throughout the vast organization of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), injecting romance and adventure into the most commonplace jobs of a practical business.

In this Company there is no such thing as complete satisfaction, even though results are good. Satisfaction may mean stagnation.

Every employee of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) strives to do his job a little better today than yesterday. Each day offers fresh opportunities and no one can predict what the results will be.

Throughout the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) this adventurous spirit is felt—by the service station men who supply the needs of motorists along the highways of the Middle West—by the staff of scientists who explore unknown realms of knowledge, seizing new information and making it practicable.

Work in this Company is not a routine grind. It is an adventure in service—with always the possibility of improvement just around the corner.

Sharing the spirit which animates all pioneers of progress, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is outstripping the past—keeping up with the present—looking to the future to which it will bring the accumulated experience and momentum of its years of service in the Middle West.

All former standards of motor car value fell when Buick for 1928 swept into view.

All previous conceptions of beauty... smartness... luxury and comfort were discarded as people thrilled at Buick's graceful, youthful, low-slung bodies and Buick's harmonized interiors, as exquisite as the finest drawing rooms.

All previous performance records faded into insignificance before Buick's brilliant abilities—mighty power, performance vibrationless beyond belief and get-away like an arrow from a bow.

Here are listed all 16 Buick models for 1928, with their prices, so that you may see for yourself how little Buick costs, when you consider how much Buick gives.
